Who tells of fortune's soldiers and the damsels that win their hearts by moonlight twists and whisks, too, that come in foreign parts? Whose heroes all are six feet high and all for women fair, will play with death and even bear the Devil in his hair? Morelli Second Hand Store Robbed Last Night; Men Accused of Robbery Are Jailed; One Here and One at Belen.

Telltale blood stains enabled the police department last night and today to unravel the mystery surrounding the robbery of the Morelli second-hand store, on South First street, near Lincoln avenue, which took place yesterday afternoon or last night. As the result of Sherlock Holmes' methods, successfully used by the police, John Kelly, who claims to have been a bimbo for 28 years, while New York as his home, is in the city jail. Frank Debone, alleged to be an escaped convict from a Georgia penitentiary, is in jail in Belen and will be brought back to Albuquerque tonight by a deputy sheriff.

Late last night the police discovered that Morelli's place had been broken into. Entrances was secured through a rear door. The man who effected an entrance had smashed a glass, cutting his hand in the attempt. The cash register had been broken into, the contents of the cash box taken, a dozen watches and as many knives were missing when the proprietor of the store, surrounded by the police, took hasty inventory.

With the blood stains as a clue, the police began work, resulting in the arrest early this morning of Kelly. Kelly was picked up because he had blood stains on his hand. A search of his clothes at the station discovered a half dozen knives and a watch Kelly proclaimed innocence of the burglary, blaming another man whom he had met in the afternoon, and whose name he did not know. The police made further inquiries and finally secured the information that a man with a bloody hand had bought a ticket for Belen at the Santa Fe ticket office just before the departure of the southbound train at 12:26 this morning. A telegram to Belen resulted in the arrest of a man who gave his name as Frank Debone. Debone had a number of knives and several watches on his person, all covered with blood. His hand had been cut with glass.

Chief of Police McMillin radioed Kelly through the paces. Kelly apparently told everything he knew about the affair. Morelli swore to day to a warrant charging the men with burglary.

Pastor of Lead Avenue Methodist Church Believes Variety and High School Authorities and Students Are Off Wrong

The dance after the game, a feature of the annual football contest held in Albuquerque, is currently estimated to be $10,000, or one-half of the Lead Avenue Methodist church and school's annual income. In a sermon yesterday Dr. Beckman criticized the action of the University of New Mexico and Albuquerque high school authorities in permitting the students in making dances a part of any athletic event.

Dr. Beckman stated that it may be tall for his highest ideals and shortest as his lowest ideals. He often tested his opinions by saying that on Saturday he and his members of the El Paso high band were told to win in their game Friday evening they replied that they had to, and they had been accustomed to placing a code over and had been expected to play in a second row.

"El Paso boys took me," said Dr. Beckman, "but these didn't come to Albuquerque to dance, but to make basketball gloriously successful."

"I wonder when the time will come," said Dr. Beckman, "when a single reference to the football, when a single reference makes all think higher than mere amusement, whether the young people in the high schools and universities and those in athletics will realize anything higher and better than closing the year with a dance."

Dr. Beckman said today that since preaching yesterday he had learned that the University of New Mexico had eliminated dances after athletic events.
